him.

This dictum was voiced yesterday by Colonel William Kiernan, superintendent at the Sing Sing farm at Wingdale, in paying the reward to Albro Travis, a railroad detective, for the capture of James Odda, who escaped from the place two weeks ago.

Deputy Sheriff Velie, of Pawling, was talking to Odda in the freight yard there, not knowing who he was, when Travis came along and arrested him. Velie immediately claimed the reward, saying that if he hadn't been talking to Odda, the railroad detective wouldn't have had the opportunity to catch him.

the Bronx and Richmond will far exceed their quotas.

All the posts are working valiantly to acquire new members, but perhaps the most ambitious program in this community was drawn by the Captain Belvidere Brooks Post, which embraces the territory between Eighty-sixth and Ninety-sixth streets, and from Central Park West to the Hudson River. William J. Fallon, the post's president, had arranged to have the Police Reserves Field Music Band last Monday night, and he held open-air of their fallen comrades.

Sergeant Joyce Kilmer Post meets to-morrow evening at 854 Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn, for the purpose of perfecting plans for the renting of a summer headquarters at Long Beach. This post will give a three-act musical comedy, "All in a Night," on June 19 in Kismet Temple.

Walter Heckman Post, 33, is arranging a marathon road race for veterans and civilians. On Memorial Day the members will plant a tree in honor of their fallen comrades. Monday night, and he held open-air meetings at Ninety-sixth Street and Broadway, and ten blocks farther downtown. As a result sixty-three veterans stepped up and signed on the dotted line.

The Belvidere Brooks Post will not The Belvidere Brooks Post will not stop with last Monday's meetings. There will be other rallies to-morrow evening, preceded by a parade, at which speeches will be made by Mr. Fallon, Dr. Henry W. Haynes, Arthur Wolf, Walter Sollinger and Walter Milkan, the same speakers who volunteered Monday. All the larger stores in the district have booths presided over by members of the post who enroll veterans.
